PLAINSOUND MUSIC EDITION

NOTES ON MICROTONAL INTONATION

The following symbols are used in addition to equal tempered 12-tone notation to approximate the tuning of intervals based on the harmonic series:

↑ or ↓ raises/lowers a note by 1/6 of a semitone (about 17 cents)

↑̂ or ↓̂ raises/lowers a note by 1/3 of a semitone (about 33 cents)

‡ or † raises/lowers a note by 1/2 of a semitone (50 cents)

Intonation may be adjusted by ear within a tolerance of ± 9 cents at any point in the music to shade the harmonic context.

New shoes, without laces version for female voice, violin, cello, accordion, percussion

music : Marc Sabat
text : Nicolas Fernandez
1998

The character is a young woman of the middle class.

The setting is a small hill in a park, a ramp, in an suburb. It is near a place where adolescents gather; a fence or a wall, near a school. The performance takes place during a lull, a quiet time of the day. There is almost no one out, very little noise.

The set is a large image of a urban landscape. The musicians are behind the image, the percussion and accordion on the left, the violin and cello on the right, so they are partly visible to the audience.

The text is read. It should be read as it comes, as if one doesn't know what it says, insisting on the words more than the phrases. The actor is amplified with a wireless microphone, through two speakers .

The audience is waiting for a while. The musicians are in their places. Very gradually they notice an approaching noise. The young woman is kicking an empty beer can along, offstage. Finally it reaches the right wing of the stage area. She begins to roll the can from one side to the other, from left to right, right to left. After 6 or 7 kicks, the musicians begin their first sound, together with the next kick. After 3 or 4 more kicks she stops.

The young woman appears on the right side of the image, her back facing the audience. She waits for a moment, then she enters, backwards. She stops in front of the image.

After a pause, she begins stretching her neck. She moves her head slowly and irregularly. She bends her head to one side, raises it, bends her head to the other side, stops, raises it again. She acts like someone who isn't sure which way to look at a painting.

She stands still, then begins reading the text.

The musical score consists of five staves. The accordion part is in the top staff, with a treble clef and a bass clef. It features a whole note chord with the instruction "sustain until comma" and a dynamic marking of p. The violin and cello parts are in the middle staves, both with treble and bass clefs. They feature a whole note chord with the instruction "sustain notes until next note or comma; + indicates pizz." and a dynamic marking of p. The glock/crotales part is in the fourth staff, with a treble clef and the instruction "(sounding 2 octaves higher throughout)". The timpani part is in the bottom staff, with a bass clef.

- I hope you're paid to put up with this, at least. Well paid, I hope. Anyway, I'm not going on like this for nothing, give me something in return or forget it.

you've got to earn it. First you have to find work, which means some people will never get paid to put up with this, they'll have to take it for nothing, or lose it all. You know they say
